Hi there,

The 1995 DHS report has a table on the current use of contraception for men (pg 50), categorized for all men, currently married men and sexually active unmarried men. Unfortunately all the survey reports for the following years don't have this table.
I'd like to ask how the percentages were calculated for the 3 categories (which variables were used), especially for sexually active married men- were all men other than those who are currently married (that would be divorced men, never married men, etc) included in this group?

Thanks much!
