Data on household expenditure is necessary in order to understand Universal Health Coverage in a country and around the world. Data on UHC related to household expenditure and health care expenditure is sparse and not standardized. This directly affects quality of the data and conclusions that can be drawn from this data. In order to achieve SDG targets for Universal Health Coverage, a proper assessment of health care access related to household expenditure and out-of-pocket expenditure must take place. Efforts such as the DHS can go a long way to achieve this.
