Hi, yes the survey's threshold for marking 'any anemia' at that time is reported to be 11 (as per the official report). I did consider the adjustments for smoking or altitude, however, the kind of difference I am getting cannot be as regard to these adjustments. While the official figures claim around 50-60% of the women to be anemic, my calculation gives a mere 30%, which is quite low and definitely not due to de facto/de jure.

Is there anything else that I am missing???
