Subject: Re: Social norms and women's work_India
Posted by Bridgette-DHS on Mon, 17 Oct 2022 16:44:50 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Following is a response from DHS staff members, Tom Pullum and Fred Arnold:

The sampling strata (v022 and v023, which are equal) are always intended to be relatively homogeneous internally, and relatively different from one another. You could use a multi-level model or one-way analysis of variance to quantify "relatively". But a stratum is not a social unit. Typically, it is a group of urban areas or a group of villages (the individual urban areas or villages are the PSUs).