Following is a response from Senior DHS staff member, Tom Pullum:

You should use the PR file rather than the HR file. The HR file has one very wide record for each household. The PR file has one record for each person in the household. In the PR file, the unique identifier for each person is hv001 hv002 hvidx. In the KR file, the identifier for each child is v001 v002 b16. Some children in the KR file have died or are not living with the mother, in which case b16 is NA or 0, and they are not in the PR file. There are also some children in the PR file who are not in the KR file, because their mothers have died or not living with the child. There have been many forum postings on this type of merge.
