Thank you very much for your response. Just a quick follow-up: based on your message (and the response from the Pakistan team), am I correct in thinking that the survey sampling for the 2012 data is not representative at the district level, but the 2017 data is representative at the district level? I am not planning on calculating district-level estimates but I was hoping to use variation across districts as a the source of identifying variation. Thanks again. Magda
