Following is a response from DHS staff member, Tom Pullum:

We apologize for the delay in this response, which is due to travel. I would agree with making that assumption, simply because if you DO NOT make that assumption, you cannot proceed. It will be important for you to say in a footnote, for example, that you have made this "simplifying" assumption because you do not have the data required to disaggregate the province(s) in question. This is the sort of thing that demographers often have to do when the data are incomplete.
