Thanks for your clarification on the education variables.

We are confused because of the discordance between v133 in the IR file and hv108 in the PR file for the same group of interviewed women. We checked this by merging the IR and PR files based on "hv001 hv002 hvidx", and comparing v133 and hv108. This resulted in about 7% difference.

Could this be due to the fact that education reported in the women's questionnaire and education reported by the head of household in the household listing may be different, for the same respondent?

Thank you Tom always for your help!!
Best,
