Hello,

I am wondering about fish consumption in the DHS8 questionnaire, specifically in Senegal, Mauritania and Gambia.

I know that powdered fish or fish paste can often be added to dishes, however when asking about fish consumption for women or children, the DHS8 questionnaire states:

"please do not answer 'yes' for any food or ingredient only used in a small amount to add flavor to a dish"

So I would like to know:

- 1) is using fish powder/paste common in these countries?
- 2) would this be classed as fish consumption or not, due to being in small amounts/used as flavoring?

I was wondering if anyone involved in data collection in Senegal, Mauritania, or Gambia might know and be able to clarify this.

I am working on a study related to nutrition from fish, so this detail could be very important for interpreting these data.

Thank you.
