Dear User,

Dr. Pullum asks:

Can you give me a specific survey that has this problem? I just looked at Ghana 2008, more or less at random, and it does not have this problem. In general, "." should not be described as "missing" (although I sometimes do this myself!). It means "not applicable". Something in the skip pattern or in the eligibility for the question is responsible for this code. Tell me the survey and I should be able to reply right away.
